Simon says Reagan budget neglects blacks

By Lisa Eisenhauer
Staff Writer

U.S. Sen. Paul Simon, as the guest speaker at a banquet held by the Carbondale chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said the budget proposed by President Reagan for 1986 and South Africa's policy of apartheid both threaten to make black Americans problems more acute.

The NAACP banquet, the local chapter's ninth annual, was held Saturday in the Student Center to recognize the group's accomplishments in the past year and to honor Roosevelt Turley, retired educator and civic leader.

Simon, in one of his first speeches in his home district since taking office in January, told the audience of close to 250 that he disapproves of Reagan's proposed budget because it does not "respond to the needs of the nation's least powerful citizens."

He said the budget, which he says he does expect will leave Congress intact, would shatter dreams of college for many low-income students, especially those from minority groups.

"We don't build a better

America by knocking people out of the education system," he said.

As South Africa's largest trading partner, America can and ought to be doing more to end the racial segregation practiced there, Simon said. A lesson should have been learned from Germany in the 1930s, that "institutional racism results in institutional violence."

Agreeing with the theme of the banquet, "The Need Is Still Great," Simon said that black Americans should voice their concerns to overcome their problems. He said that unless the concerns are spelled out, white citizens tend to have a "lack of knowledge and sensitivity" to the needs of minorities.

Grant given to aid literacy

By Bruce Kirkham
Staff Writer

The Shawnee Library System will receive a $78,000 state grant to assist the estimated 200,000 functionally illiterate adults in Southern Illinois.

Secretary of State Jim Edgar announced the grant prior to chairing the fifth in a series of statewide hearings by the Illinois Literacy Council at the Student Center Friday.

The grant will be used to train volunteers, purchase training materials and prepare a directory of literacy resources, said Rose Hoshiko of the Shawnee Library System. The grant will also be used to provide a full-time coordinator and support clerical staff for the program.

The grant will enable the acquisition and dissemination of up to 45 collections of literacy training materials in the 16-county area served by the Shawnee Library System, Hoshiko said.

Another aspect of the grant will be a publicity campaign to make those people who could benefit from literacy training aware of the programs that exist in Southern Illinois.

One problem in combating the illiteracy problem in Illinois is getting people to take advantage of available programs.

"One of the biggest problems is getting people to come forward and say 'I have a reading problem,'" Edgar said.

The council heard testimony from eight people who lead literacy training programs, and their overriding request was for increased funding by the state.

Grace Duff of the Cairo Adult Education Center said that there are sufficient volunteers for literacy training programs, but what is needed is funding for personnel to oversee and coordinate such programs.

Steve Shumaker of the Carbondale Evaluation and Developmental Center told the council that recent changes in the state's funding formula which reduced the rate of funding for time spent with students forced an enlargement of class sizes from about five students to 10 students per class.

Shumaker reiterated the pleas to the council for more funding. "Illiteracy will not disappear or go away by just wishing it away," he said. "Without a push from the top, the status quo will remain."

The council also heard testimony from Bob Wright, 31, and Don Hefner, 47, both of Mount Vernon, who are enrolled in literacy training programs sponsored by Rend Lake College. The men said that their reading skills had improved from sixth- to eighth-grade levels in one semester of training in the program.

Stereo maker, fraternity named in fire suit

By Karen Winkberger
Staff Writer

A former SIU-C student injured in a 1983 fraternity house fire has filed a three-count lawsuit against two owners of the Sigma Tau Gamma house, a fellow house resident and a manufacturer of the stereo equipment which may have contributed to the fire.

A suit filed last week in the Jackson County Circuit Court in Murphysboro names Neil McTaggart as plaintiff against owners Sigma Tau Gamma and Alpha Sigma Alumni Association, STG member

Evan Rushing and J.V.C. Company of America, Inc.

McTaggart, who has retained Gerald S. Reed of Murphysboro as his attorney, alleges the Feb. 6, 1983, morning fire left him with permanent lung damage, body scars and a back injury resulting from burns and smoke inhalation.

The suit claims the fire started in Rushing's second-room floor, from an overloading of electrical outlets, and that Rushing's stereo equipment allowed an excessive current flow.

McTaggart alleges that Rushing had several plugs in one electrical outlet, and should have known the outlet was being overloaded. He also claims that J.V.C. had supplied a stereo amplifier which was dangerous because it allowed an excessive current flow.

The suit also claims that the fraternity operators failed to maintain safe electrical wiring, warn occupants of the fire hazards and provide fire alarms.

Rushing, a senior in economics, said Sunday that McTaggart was the only one of 12 residents to be injured. He said McTaggart's room was one of three rooms in the attic of the fraternity house, located at 506 S. Poplar St.

Rushing said an independent fire investigator hired by the fraternity reported the cause of the fire to be a malfunction of the stereo receiver and a power surge.

The suit claims McTaggart was hospitalized from Feb. 6 to Feb. 12, 1983, and that his medical expenses have already cost him $5,260.

The suit asks damages in excess of $15,000 in three counts, one against the two fraternity house owners, one against Rushing and one against the stereo manufacturer.

Rushing said he did not see the suit filed by McTaggart, but earlier this week received notice of a suit filed against him by an insurance company of Alpha Sigma Alumni Association.

Rushing said the company also filed suit against J.V.C.

Rushing said he suspects the insurance company is suing to pay for possible damages sought by McTaggart, and that he may be a "pawn to get to J.V.C."

"They know I don't have anything and J.V.C. does," he said.

Farmers' plight prompts statewide meeting

By John Krukowski
Staff Writer

The plight of farmers continues to be a matter of concern to Southern Illinois legislators, with State Rep. Bruce Richmond, D-Murphysboro, announcing that the House Agriculture Committee has called a statewide meeting later this month to give Illinois farmers a chance to air their views.

Richmond, who heads the committee, said the Feb. 19 meeting will allow farmers "to come in and tell their problems." The Agriculture Committee will then take the information it has gathered to Washington, D.C., the next day and meet with Agriculture Secretary John Bogue "to pinpoint the problems of farmers."

Richmond said that the problems facing Illinois' farmers became especially acute to him when he saw the results of an Illinois Department of Agriculture survey taken of 1500 farmers in the fall of 1984.

Half of the farmers, he said, indicated that they would be out of business within five years if the agricultural climate does not improve. Seventeen percent said they couldn't last another year, Richmond said.

Richmond said he is not

Pentagon study is basis for chemical weapon push

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon, after a major review of U.S. knowledge about Soviet war plans, says it no longer believes a war in Europe would involve Soviet use of chemical weapons "on a massive scale." But the secret study concluded that the Soviets might use their growing inventory of gas against airfields, communications centers and other strategic targets, and has bolstered a renewed Defense Department push for new U.S. chemical weapons.

Kim's return to South Korea causes trouble

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Two congressmen and other U.S. supporters of Kim Dae-jung detailed rough treatment they said was meted out to the Kim party on its arrival and asked President Reagan on Sunday to put off the U.S.-South Korean summit. The Americans charged in a statement that the government of President Chun Doo-hwan "broke its promise to our government that the return of Kim Dae-jung would be 'trouble-free.'"

CBS prepares for key witness in libel case

NEW YORK (AP) — Lawyers for CBS will call one of their most important witnesses to the stand this week in their defense against retired Gen. William C. Westmoreland's $120 million libel suit against the network. Col. Gains Hawkins, who was in charge of estimating enemy strength for Westmoreland's staff in Vietnam, is the only defense witness who was highly placed in Westmoreland's command in the fall of 1967 when the final figures about Vietnamese Communist strength were being thrashed out for a report to President Lyndon B. Johnson and other policy makers.

Jailed black leader turns down release offer

SOWETO, South Africa (AP) — Nelson Mandela's daughter said Sunday the long-imprisoned black leader has rejected the white-minority government's offer of conditional release with the words: "I cannot sell my birthright, nor am I prepared to sell the birthright of the people, to be free." Zinzi Mandela quoted from a statement she said her father gave to her mother.

More couples using sterilization, study says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Just over half of U.S. couples of childbearing age are physically able to have children, as Americans increasingly choose sterilization to limit their families, new government statistics show. Growing use of surgical sterilization has sharply reduced that percentage since 1965, when nearly three-quarters of couples including wives aged 15 to 44 were considered physically able to have children, according to a study released Sunday by the National Center for Health Statistics.

Historic trail funding left out of federal budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan's first stop after accepting the Republican Party's presidential nomination in August was Chicago, where he signed legislation establishing the Illinois & Michigan Canal National Heritage Corridor. The corridor is to be a 100-mile-long trail of historic sights and recreational opportunities. The legislation authorized 10 years of federal funding to coordinate development of the corridor

WOODRIDGE (AP) — A former checkout clerk says a jury's judgment of $136,700 against a food store where she had worked was a victory for left-handed people in a "right-handed world." Crystal Sagen, 24, quit the Jewel store in Naperville and sued the Melrose Park-based Jewel Food Stores chain after the store required her to check out groceries with her right hand, although when she used her left hand, she said she was one of the company's fastest clerks.

Candidate wants aldermen council

Editor's note: This is the first in a series of profiles on the candidates for the Carbondale City Council. The seven candidates will be presented alphabetically. A primary election on Feb. 26 will narrow the field to four, from which two City Council members will be elected April 2.

By Bob Tita
Staff Writer

In his campaign brochure, Norvell "C. Jr." Haynes, candidate for Carbondale City Council, urges residents to "take back the city government."

Haynes said he is running for one of the two council seats up for election because he is "sick and tired of what is happening on the council."

Haynes says he wants to abolish all large council members in favor of splitting the city into wards with aldermen. He says that five to seven wards should be created to give all the residents of Carbondale adequate representation.

Haynes, 55, said the problems that plague downtown redevelopment would be alleviated if an alderman was responsible for the area. Although he is not opposed to the convention center, Haynes said he would be open to other types of business development.

Haynes said if elected he would try to "establish a blue-ribbon committee to have a complete investigation" of the redevelopment project. He said that more residents should become involved in downtown redevelopment.

"High citizen participation would eliminate the animosity that surrounds it (redevelopment)," Haynes said.

He said he favors repealing Carbondale's home rule status because he believes city officials in the past have misused home rule powers in the downtown redevelopment project.

Haynes said he favors some form of "railroad relief" but said downtown businesses should not be disrupted or eliminated. He said the location of the new Amtrak station eliminated small businesses.

He said railroad relocation officials should consider elevating the Carbondale tracks rather than depressing the rails in a trench.

Haynes said the difficulty the city is having in funding social service programs can be lessened by eliminating waste and inefficiency rather than programs.

He charged that the city staff should be reviewed each year along with the supported program. Attacks Youth Program. He attacks Social Service Team. Haynes, who is the former director of the Citizen Participation Group for the Carbondale Model Cities Program, said the city-run health service program at the Eurma C. Hayes Center should not be closed down.

"The city council has to be more responsible for the citizens," he said.

Bringing more industry to Carbondale and upgrading housing would be concerns of Haynes if he is elected, he said.

One problem that Haynes says will not go away is the strained relations between the Carbondale Police Department and residents. He said the city council should establish a human rights commission to bring existing problems to light.

Although the police were cleared of harassment charges, Haynes said, "there is still a need to this kind of relationship."

Haynes is unemployed and works as a volunteer at Hill House in the Hayes Center.

13 named in federal drug bust

By Jane Grandolfo
Staff Writer

Thirteen people, including a husband and wife from Carbondale, have been indicted and charged with conspiracy to distribute marijuana, a representative from the U.S. Attorney's office said.

Each of the 13 was charged with one count to distribute in excess of 1,000 pounds of marijuana, said Michael Carr, assistant U.S. attorney. The charge carries a maximum possible penalty of 15 years imprisonment and a $125,000 fine or both, Carr said.

The indictments were handed down Thursday, and several of the defendants have yet to be arrested, he said. All the defendants are local residents except for one man who is from Corpus Christi, Texas.

Two separate additional charges were filed against Jack A. Hrvatin and Judy L. Hrvatin of Carbondale for allegedly filing false individual income tax returns for the past two years. Both Hrvatins are accused of failing to report extensive business dealings in the trafficking of controlled substances, Carr said. The Hrvatins' alleged drug trafficking generated receipts in excess of $876,000 in 1982, and $1 million in 1983, he said.

Jack Hrvatin is being detained without bond, pending trial, after a hearing before a federal judge determined that Hrvatin "posed a threat to society," Carr said. Mrs. Hrvatin was released Friday.

Trial for all 13 defendants has been set for March 11 before Chief U.S. District Judge James L. Foreman, in Benton.

Jones says he can offer experience

By Thomas Mangan
Staff Writer

If voters count years of life experience as a qualification for the Carbondale City Council elections, Councilman Archie Jones should be re-elected by a landslide.

At 83, Jones is the oldest of seven men in the primary race, running for his fifth term on the council.

"Age is all in your mind," he said. "If your mind is OK, then everything else will be."

Jones said he decided to run for council because he believes he can lend his knowledge and experience to issues and problems that face Carbondale residents.

While he has consistently supported downtown redevelopment, he said the "convention center is not engraved in stone." He said he would support other developments.

"It doesn't matter what goes in down there as long as everybody is proud of it," Jones said.

Jones says he supports the

Election '85

railroad relocation project and is pleased by the new engineering plans that have cut several million dollars off the original cost.

"By showing the federal government that we are saving money and cutting costs they might look more favorably on us," he said. Plans call for the federal government to fund almost 95 percent of the job.

Jones favors continued city funding of social service programs. However, he said the council should monitor the way the money is spent to make sure that money does not "fall through the cracks."

"The City Council hasn't really known how every dollar has been spent," he said.

Jones has proposed that the SIU School of Medicine consider becoming involved with the city's financially troubled health service at the Eurma C. Hayes Center. He believes the health service should continue to operate and could be a valuable learning experience for young doctors.

Jones said he is against changing the council to an aldermanic system. He said he considers himself a representative of the entire community.

"I've walked all over town to get to know the streets and the people," Jones said. "I've been received really well."

Cyanide resolution an absurd proposal

THE INTRODUCTION AND SUBSEQUENT WITHDRAWAL of a resolution calling for the availability of cyanide capsules to be used in the case of a nuclear disaster is folly at its best.

The bill was designed, ostensibly, to raise students' "consciousness" over the seriousness of nuclear weapons. But what the bill really raised was laughter and contempt.

Following Brown University's lead, the bill's sponsor apparently thought it would be nifty to make a strong statement about the absurdity of the nuclear threat. But the "statement" proves as absurd as the issue which it addresses.

Mass suicide is not a novel approach to facing imminent death. Thousands of Berliners took their own lives in World War II rather than face the wrath of the coming Russian Army.

But this is not the same thing.

NUCLEAR PARANOIA, perhaps at its peak during the days of bomb shelter building in the late 1950s, proved to the nation the pointlessness of living in perpetual fear. SIU-C's maze of underground bomb shelters, complete with stale crackers and nondescript meats, provides a first-hand view of that mentality.

Akin to this state of paranoia — unique in the 20th Century — is the "solution" of dispensing cyanide capsules. Rather than inspire greater nuclear awareness, cyanide solutions instead instill more fear.

If the only way to raise consciousness is to offer the alternative of suicide, then mankind is indeed in serious shape. Suicide, as existentialist philosopher Albert Camus taught us, is no solution to Man's problems. Cyanide solutions don't lead to positive, effective measures aimed at reducing the nuclear threat. They only make the acceptance of the threat more palatable.

If the senator who introduced the bill wanted to raise consciousness, a better way might have been to blast the United States and Soviet Union for being so casual about arms control talks. Or better yet, formally challenge the two sides to make some sort of progress at the coming arms control talks.

President Reagan might not ever catch wind of such a statement, but if the point USO is trying to make is a symbolic one, why not make it a constructive one? After all, who will need cyanide if indeed nuclear war occurs?

Targeting Amtrak for elimination a serious flaw in Reagan budget

On Oct. 1, 1985 there will become a serious transportation problem for SIU-C students. Both the president of the United States and the Republican Senate Budget Committee have targeted the program for elimination. Amtrak has reduced its need for subsidy by 24 percent since 1981, improved its on-board services, completely replaced or refurbished its entire fleet of locomotives and cars and is hauling record loads.

I frequently ride the trains the "City of New Orleans" and the "Shawnee" from Carbondale to Chicago and the "Empire Builder" to my home state of Montana. The train is an affordable, all weather alternative to driving or flying.

I urge people to write their congressmen, senators, and the White House urging them to continue to operate Amtrak. We can save Amtrak if they hear our voices.

I feel that plans to derail Amtrak are unfair since the other modes of transportation receive subsidy in the form of air traffic control, massive highway projects, etc. — Jim Hurtle, Cape Girardeau, Mo.

Stage Company production was excellent in all aspects

I went to "Crimes of the Heart" also on Friday Jan. 25 because two friends had an extra ticket for me to use.

I felt the play was excellent in casting, staging, performing and also in its previous writing by the author.

Maybe I had expected too little from Stage Company, but it seemed a miniature performance similar to "The Big Chill" or even "Terms of Endearment." I felt all six performers did very well, five of the six excellently. I was moved deeply by the "three sisters" by their interpretation and interaction on stage.

The only disagreeable part seemed the theater seat, but I sat on my folded overcoat.

Cheers to the Stage Company! — C.Denny Freese, Carbondale.

Writer reviewed script, not show

The Jan. 29 edition of the Daily Egyptian contained what was called a "theater review." I was very disappointed to read what staff writer Belinda Edmondson had to say about "Crimes of the Heart."

I feel that if Ms. Edmondson was going to criticize the literary value of the play, as opposed to the theatrical production, she should have voiced her criticism in a "literary review" and left the Stage Company and its production of the play completely out of the matter.

Ms. Edmondson is certainly entitled to her opinion of the play and its production. However, she neglected to criticize or praise the actual production of the show (i.e. acting, set, costumes, etc.). As it was, she wrote a very critical literary review of the script but said nothing at all about the credibility of the show as a whole.

She merely voiced her negative feelings about the script, threw in a few performers' names and added a footnote stating that the show will be running for two more weekends.

Personally, I do not read reviews to hear the story line. I'd prefer to hear whether or not I should spend the time and money to see the show. The reviewer certainly left me wondering. — Wendy Hill, sophomore, Political Science.

Quick fix hurts team

While I must admit that I have not been interested in Saluki men's basketball for very long, there seems to be one major weakness in the SIU-C men's basketball program. After scrutinizing the basketball team's roster, I noticed a substantial number of junior college transfers on the team.

Certainly, in some situations one or two junior college transfers can enhance a team's performance. However, it is more advantageous to a program to recruit good, solid, consistent high school players.

In the basketball hotbeds of Chicago, Memphis and St. Louis, SIU-C should be able to recruit a few good basketball players who may not have superstar statistics, and are therefore overlooked by major college programs. The long-range advantages of recruiting high school players far outweigh the immediate gains of recruiting junior college players.

Normally, high school draftees will be in the program for four years, which gives the players time to acclimate themselves to the coach's system. Freshmen who arrive on campus at the same time are molded into a cohesive unit by their junior or senior years; thus, a winning system is created.

One thing is for sure; the quick fix method of recruiting junior college players instead of high school players is not the solution for SIU-C. — Charles Conner, School of Law.

Comments on alcohol abuse perpetuate negative image

John McKillip, a psychology professor here at SIU-C, recently offered a piece of his research in a Jan. 30 article in the Wall Street Journal titled "Controversy Over Rising Beer Promotions on College Campuses" in a paragraph subtitled "Effect on Students." He stated that his research shows that of this university's 20,000 students "one-fifth test poorly or skip classes at least once a month because of heavy drinking." The paragraph above this quote defines heavy beer drinking as "those consuming 5 or more beers a week."

It is really quite amazing to me that all the professors of psychology at all the colleges in the United States, a professor at SIU-C is singled out for his research that says 4,000 of us miss classes and test poorly because of heavy drinking problems.

What is the motivation behind Mr. McKillip, who has tenure at this university, for berating students he is supposed to be aiding in obtaining their degrees? I'm not qualified to say whether or not there is a specific alcohol problem on this specific campus, but if I were I most certainly wouldn't offer that information to a national publication.

Rather I would simply make a more generalized statement as did the Rev. Edward Hanrahan, dean of students at Boston College, who told the Journal, "Practically every university is encountering alcohol abuse." In fact, no one in the article made a direct correlation between alcohol abuse and the problems it causes at their respective universities, except, of course, for our professor McKillip.

The Wall Street Journal is not sold at grocery store check-out stands and is not intended for people who want to find out what's happened on their favorite soaps. It is read by our future employers — people who must make a decision as to whether or not the university, whose name is embroidered in fancy lettering on our degrees, has provided us with a satisfactory education or was a breeding ground for alcohol abuse.

So I have a suggestion, as a student, to protect ourselves from future such abuses. The next time a psychologist approaches you and wants to know how much alcohol you consume, just appear to be real confused (they like that) and say "What's alcohol?"

Your answer won't make the pages of the Wall Street Journal, but it might at least give you a better chance at being taken seriously when you seek employment as a graduate of SIU-C. — John E. Baryla, senior, Computer Science.

President's proposed '86 budget would be disastrous to country

To Congress and the media of the United States: I will get right to the point. No need to beat around the bush. I strongly disapprove of the higher education reductions and proposed cuts in President Reagan's 1986 budget. This budget would hurt, maim and kill this great nation of ours politically, economically and socially.

Those who are unemployed or receive little income — with children just beginning college — won't be able to carry the burden of financing a student's education. I implore Congress to listen to me, think about it, then act. Think about how our nation will be crippled if Congress passes the proposed 1986 budget, with its education reductions.

Go out and ask the people of this nation if they would rather see an increase in funding of 10 percent for farming, education, and other useful programs, along with a decrease of 10 percent in defense. Mr. Reagan's plan is a "fantasy budget conceived in the land of never-ending deficits," according to Oregon Sen. Mark Hatfield.

I'm a tax paying citizen, a registered voter, a blood donor and concerned student at SIU-C. I challenge Congress and Mr. Reagan to answer my plea. Is this not a democratic nation for the people, by the people and of the people?

Is not the American way ... equality, the right of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness? Think of the people's best interest, then act on the issues at hand and make the wise decision.

I will not stand by and watch any man, woman or child, regardless of race, religion, creed or color, run my life and alter my education without my having a say in the matter.

I urge everyone to write letters to Congress. Sign petitions and bring them to the attention of Congress, Mr. Reagan and the leaders of this nation. We will not lay down and accept the proposed 1986 budget. "Unify ... the government does not run the people, the people run the government!" — Daniel M. Jones, freshman, Accounting.

Violence no solution to apartheid

In response to the Feb. 5 Daily Egyptian article entitled "Grac student tells of South African injustices," I would like to correct some misconceptions created by fellow South African Sheila Musi's comments. (All figures quoted here appeared in "The South African Foundation, 1983 Information Digest." The South African Foundation is an independent organization).

The reason the government closes the schools during protests is because of violence. Closing the schools prevents the students from destroying property and burning the schools.

Not all universities in South Africa are racially segregated as the article implied. The two largest and most respected universities in South Africa — the University of Cape Town and the University of the Witwatersrand (in Johannesburg) — are both open to all races and are not discriminatory.

The largest correspondence university, the University of South Africa, is also open to all races, and the black enrollment there in 1981 was 11,774. The budget assigned to blacks' education increased by 28.7 percent from 1982 to 1983, while total government spending increased only 13.7 percent.

Blacks' education in South Africa, although inferior to whites, is of the highest level in all of Africa. Africa's schoolgoers constituted 13.3 percent of the total population in 1975, while in South Africa 21 percent of the black population attended school.

I hope most people will realize that violence is no solution to South Africa's injustices, and that peaceful cooperation is the only way to bring a lasting change. Progress is being made, and should be encouraged in an effort to keep the region stable. Violence and American disinvestment will only be met with hostility within South Africa, and will decrease future cooperation and America's positive influence over our country. — Erwin Kratz, sophomore, Physical Education.

Students should utilize LTU

It has come to that time of year when students must either renew their lease or start the search for the house they never find. Most students aren't looking for a house with extraordinary luxuries — just a clean, bug-free place with a porch and a cooperative landlord will do. Although this isn't much to ask, it is rarely found.

I've been attending SIU-C for four years and have lived in dwellings on all sides of town, each proving to be an experience, whether good or bad. An opportunity I didn't have when I embarked on my initial house search was the referral service of the Landlord Tenant Union.

The L.T.U. offers information and advice to those seeking a rental home in Carbondale. Through slide presentations students living on campus are informed of the do's and don'ts of rental etiquette, by those who've already made the mistakes. I advise students to take advantage of this service, so they don't look back on their domestic life at college as a housing nightmare. — Dawn Cunningham, senior Public Relations.

Culture caused Cambodian revolt, prof says

By Belinda Edmondson
Staff Writer

The failure of American foreign policy-makers to take into account the historical and social background of Cambodia contributed to the breakdown of U.S. policy in the region, SIU-C professor William Turley said.

If the policy-makers had understood the background of Cambodia, he said, they would have realized the futility of trying to prevent a Communist revolution and would never have become involved in the first place.

Turley made these remarks at the University Four Theatres in the University Mall Thursday night, when he lectured on the political background which led to the events in "The Killing Fields," a film being shown there.

The film, based on the true story of New York Times columnist Sydney Schamburg and photographer Dith Pran, is about the friendship of two reporters, one from the New York Times and one a native Cambodian, who work together in Cambodia during the last days of the American-backed Cambodian government.

The two are separated when the Khmer Rouge take over the country. After the American Embassy closes, Schamburg and Pran seek refuge in the French Embassy, but Pran is refused entry because of his citizenship.

The remainder of the film traces Pran's attempts to survive the nightmarish occupation of the Pol Pot regime and to escape to neighboring Thailand. Pran, as a professional who speaks both French and English, is in particular danger; the Khmer Rouge systematically wipes out all citizens who speak the languages of the "imperialists" and who held professional positions under the previous regime.

According to Turley, the Khmer Rouge came to power as a result of the whittling away of Cambodian territory by neighboring countries, compounded with the imposition of French rule on the native population.

"French rule set the scene for erosion of Cambodian culture. The Cambodians felt they were ruled by the French and the Vietnamese. They felt that their country was in a state of 'advanced disappearance,'" Turley said.

From this fear that they could not control their own destiny sprang the militant Communist Khmer Rouge movement, led by Pol Pot. The Pol Pot regime wanted to retrieve Cambodia's former grandeur, said Turley, but to do this they thought they had to put the country through a period of "purification."

Purification meant ridding the country of all traces of "decadent" French or other foreign cultures. The Khmer Rouge thought that the country needed to be unified if it was to defend itself against its neighbors, said Turley. For this reason, any Cambodian who bore any foreign traits was assassinated.

In the film, Pran pretends he is an uneducated peasant to escape being killed by the Khmer Rouge. According to Turley, this was the only method of survival for the educated Cambodians.

"The more stupid you could make yourself appear, the better," he said.

The Khmer Rouge also tried to wipe out the link between the old culture and the new society because of the ever-present political threat posed by the previous Cambodian monarchy, said Turley.

He cited one memorable moment of the film, in which a child is taught to erase the link between the parents and the children in a chalk drawing, as a typical method of the Khmer Rouge to cut links with the old society by raising the children as a "new generation."

Father rescues children from would-be kidnapper

CICERO (AP) — Two young boys say their father acted "just like 'The Fall Guy' on TV" when he daringly rescued them from a kidnapper and car thief.

Larry Banks Sr. of this Chicago suburb had parked his car with the motor running and his two sons — Matthew Banks, 4, and Larry Banks Jr., 5 — on the front seat before he went into a post office to buy stamps Saturday, said police Sgt. Bernard Walsh.

While waiting in line, Banks said he saw a man who had been pacing the sidewalk in front of the post office suddenly jump into the driver's seat of Bank's car, Walsh said.

The man appeared startled to see the two youngsters but told them not to worry because he was their father's friend, the boys later told police.

As the car lurched forward, Banks ran out of the post office, yelling "Those are my kids," Walsh said.

Banks, a harness driver at Sportsman's Park, leaped onto the hood of the moving automobile and managed to hang on as the car headed down the street, ran a stoplight and collided head-on with an oncoming auto, Walsh said.

Groups will get ticket discounts for Shryock play, director says

By Jane Grandotro
Staff Writer

An unusual kind of play is coming to SIU-C. But the director of Shryock Auditorium is doing something not so unusual — he's offering group discounts for the play.

"We give discounts for virtually every show. It's not arbitrary, it's a marketing strategy," said Director Robert Cerchio. "The decision as to what group is targeted for the discount is based on the appeal the play has for them."

The latest show targeted for a discount is Torch Song Trilogy, the winner of a 1983 Tony Award for best play. It tells the story, in three one-act plays, of Arnold, a young man on a quest for a good home, a decent job, and someone to share his life with. However, Arnold pursues this dream with a different twist; he is a gay male earning his living as a female impersonator.

The group targeted for a $2 discount off the ticket price of this show will be the Gay and Lesbian People's Union, Cerchio said. A professor also obtained discounts for two of his classes to see the show, and theater students "automatically" receive a discount, Cerchio said.

Discounts are usually given in the form of coupons and range from $2 to half off, he said. "It depends on how much money we need to make on the show or how much appeal the show has."

Cerchio said he would gladly give discounts to just about any group who asks. Some past recipients have been elementary schools, dormitories, the Veterans Club, and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. It boils down to a marketing standpoint, Cerchio said.

Torch Song Trilogy will be performed at Shryock on Monday, Feb. 18. Due to the adult subject matter, this show is recommended for mature audiences.

Senior citizens center needs funds for repair

By Cathy Brown
Staff Writer

The Carbondale Senior Citizens Center announced plans Thursday to start a fund-raising drive in March to help pay for repairs to the center's building at 409 N. Springer St.

Orien Wallace, chairman of the fund-raising committee, said the center hopes to raise $75,000 to pay for a new roof and to convert the center's coal heating system, which has broken down three times this winter, to a gas system.

Wallace said the building, which was used as a grade school before the center, has needed repairs since the center moved there in 1982. Recently "some problems that existed have gotten critical," he said.

Carol Johnson, executive director of the center, said kerosene space heaters have been used several times this winter when the furnace quit working, and there have been days when the center couldn't accommodate people because of the lack of heat.

She said another problem with the antiquated coal boiler is that "we have to have somebody taking care of the furnace twenty-four hours a day in weather like this," which is "an exorbitant cost."

The roof, which has been patched many times, still leaks. Johnson said an architect told her that "If we let (the roof) go, it's going to fall down on us."

Wallace said any federal or state money which the center receives must be used for operating the center's social programs, leaving little for repairs, so the center is appealing to the community for help.

The committee will appeal to civic groups and to people by direct mail. Wallace said people will be able to spread pledges of money out over a number of months if that would make it easier for them to pay.

One good thing about this community campaign is that the money will go directly to the center, instead of being "washed in Washington or Springfield," said Wallace.

Wallace said the center needs about $150,000 to make the repairs. They hope to raise $75,000 to add to the $50,000 they have in their building fund.

To make up the rest of the needed money, they are "selling shingles" for the roof at $10 each to senior citizens. Johnson said contributions to the "buy-a-shingle" program is "something senior citizens can afford. We wanted to make it so everybody can take part."

Wallace said the fundraising campaign would be a "one-shot proposition," not to be repeated on an annual basis.

The center provides services to about 5000 senior citizens in Jackson County. Three thousand of those people live in Carbondale.

The center tries to help older persons keep active in their community and to keep them in their own homes. Center services provide meals, transportation, visitation, telephone checkups, adult day care, chore service, recreation, and education.

Developed nations are to blame for famine, grad student says

By Lisa Eisenhauer
Staff Writer

A seminar was given Friday to help people "come to grips with a problem" — a problem that takes the life of 24 people, 18 of them children, every minute.

As such, the 40 or so people who attended the first half of the "Ending Hunger Briefing" learned some saddening facts about starvation in the world, but they also learned, or at least were assured, that these facts can be changed.

Nancy Addison, graduate student in geology, told her audience, with the help of slide shows and workbooks, that the five types of hunger that affect one fifth of the world's people can all be ended.

The end of hunger can come, she said, whenever the people in the developed nations of the world decide to bring it about.

Addison said that despite some common beliefs, there is enough food on the earth to feed everyone.

"For the first time in history the question is not 'Can hunger end?' but 'When will hunger end?'" she said. "The briefing will be worthwhile if you leave knowing that we are the people who are responsible."

The reason that people of the developed nations are responsible for world hunger is because they do not perceive the magnitude or the specific facts of the problem, Addison said. She said that well-fed people too often view the hungry as abstract objects of pity, instead of living but helpless people who are "doing their lion's share" to overcome their condition.

After being asked to put their points of view aside just for one day, the audience was told by Addison to realize that "hunger exists, it doesn't have to, and you are the key to ending it."

Addison noted that so far this century 75 nations have overcome massive problems of hunger and, of these nations, none have fallen prey to the problem again. Among these nations are Romania and Chile. She stopped short of offering details about how individuals can help end hunger, saying this information comes in the second part of the briefing, on Feb. 15.

The briefing was put together by The Hunger Project, an international group dedicated to ending hunger by the year 2000, with facts provided by UNICEF, the World Bank and the Food and Agriculture Association.

Bachelor's degree losing value, college panel says

WASHINGTON (AP) — College curriculum has been so watered down that "almost anything goes" and the bachelor's degree has lost its intrinsic value, a panel of prominent educators said Sunday.

"The curriculum has given way to a marketplace philosophy: it is a supermarket where students are shoppers and professors are merchants of learning. Fads and fashions ... enter where wisdom and experience should prevail," said the Association of American Colleges.

The educators blamed professors who place a higher premium on research and their own advancement than on teaching.

"Teaching comes first," they declared in the report, "Integrity in the College Curriculum."

"This message must be forcefully delivered by academic leaders responsible for undergraduate education to the research universities that have awarded the Ph.D. degree to generation after generation of potential professors professionally unprepared to teach," it said.

"As for what passes as a college curriculum, almost anything goes," the AAC report said. "We have reached a point at which we are more confident about the length of a college education than its content and purpose."

Relief program being started by Peace Corps

By Rodney Sanford
Staff Writer

Peace Corps representatives have outlined a plan to combat famine-causing conditions in Africa, as part of their ongoing recruitment campaign.

The program, titled the Africa Food Systems Initiative, will be a 10-year effort by the Peace Corps, the Agency for International Development, the U.S. Department of Agriculture and other volunteer aid organizations.

A Peace Corps report on the program read, "The initiative's key objectives are the development of self-sustaining food systems as well as local capacity to continue development process."

The program will start in Zaire and Mali in 1986 with 150 Peace Corps volunteers working in one of three stages of food production. Fifty corps volunteers will be added in 1987, and 12 African countries will be under the initiative by 1990.

"Depending upon the need of the area in question, the Peace Corps will work in pre-production, production or post production," said Tim Lang, SIU Peace Corps recruiter during a seminar in the School of Agriculture on Thursday.

In pre-production, volunteers will work with farmers on irrigation practices, soil improvement, seed multiplication, animal traction and tool production.

Volunteers in the production phase will try to develop new seed varieties and promote animal management, vegetable production and beekeeping.

Improved harvesting and storage techniques as well as the development of processing, transportation and marketing practices are the goals of the initiative's post-production phase.

Lang, a graduate student in plant and soil science, said the program will place emphasis on small farms.

Kevin Sinn and Ray Smith, corps volunteers, gave presentations of their work in Ghana and Cameroon.

In Ghana, Sinn said Peace Corps volunteers have taught natives to use animals in field work as well as techniques in animal care and personal health.

"When the Peace Corps is in a village, they act as a 'rural doctor,'" Sinn said.

Smith, who worked with Cameroon fish breeders, said his team assisted the natives in dam and pond production, pond fertilization and fish population control.

Something else that Simon said he feels should be turned around, but probably won't, is the appointment of Edwin Meese as attorney general. He said he will not be voting for Reagan's appointee because Meese "has not shown the sensitivity" to civil rights he feels the chief enforcer of these rights should possess.

Simon told his largely black audience that he has been a member of the NAACP since he was in college, "when it was radical to be a member." He also noted that when he and his wife, Jeanne, were Illinois state representatives they were the only white legislators in the state to be NAACP members.

Dixon hopes to have the measure passed by March 1.

McDonnell qualifies for NCAA indoor finals

By Mike Frey
Sports Editor

Freshman Richard McDonnell became the second member of the SIU-C men's track and field team to qualify for a spot in next month's NCAA Indoor Championships, turning in a school record time of 2:08.90 in the 1,000-yard run at Saturday's Domino Pizza Classic in Champaign.

Teammate Mike Elliott had qualified for the NCAA finals last week by registering a time of 2:09.45 in the 1,000-yard run. Elliott's mark was the previous school record.

Coach Bill Cornell said the meet was designed to give athletes a chance to qualify for the NCAA finals, with no team scores kept. However, he said he was not disappointed because most of his athletes had failed to qualify.

"Once again, our team made an improvement from the previous week," he said. "Now we will take a week off to prepare for the conference meet."

Cornell said he thought McDonnell, a native of Great Britain, had the potential to qualify in the 1,000-yard run. He said he was surprised by Elliott's performance the previous week.

"I thought he could do it," Cornell said. "That's what we were shooting for."

The Salukis had two other individual winners, both of whom nearly missed qualifying for the NCAA meet.

Michael Franks won the 440-yard dash with a time of 47.73. The NCAA standard qualifying time in the event is 47.46.

Elliott won the 800-yard run with a time of 1:51.90. The NCAA standard time in the 800-yard run is 1:51.42.

"Elliott was too slow in the first half of the race," Cornell said. "Otherwise he would have made it."

"Franks didn't get through the first 200 yards fast enough. He also didn't have anybody pushing him. The second place time was 49.20."

Franks will have one more opportunity to qualify in the 440-yard run — at the Last Chance Invitational at Murfreesboro, Tenn., on March 2. He finished third in the event at last year's NCAA finals with a time of 46.69.

The Saluki mile relay team also picked a win for the third week in a row. The quartet of Franks, Elliott, Steve Breathett and Mark Hill finished with a time of 3:15.18.

The Salukis also had a couple of personal best performances in the meet. Senior weight man Tom Smith finished fifth with a personal best toss of 56 feet, 7.5 inches in the 35-pound weight throw. The event is similar to the hammer throw.

David Lamont placed third in the invitational mile run with a personal best time of 4:08.53.

Other strong performances for SIU-C were turned in by Gavin Harshbarger, who finished second in the triple jump with an effort of 49 feet, 10.75 inches; Hill, who finished third in the 440-yard dash with a time of 49.27; Breathett, who placed third in the long jump with an effort of 22 feet, eight inches; and Jim Sullivan, who finished third in the pole vault with an effort of 15 feet, 5.75 inches.

Cornell said this year's Domino Pizza Classic wasn't as competitive as it has been in past years. He said 60 teams were represented at last year's meet.

"The meet was not as well supported as it has been in the past," he said.

It was incorrectly reported in Thursday's edition of the Daily Egyptian that SIU-C students and children 12 and under would be able to purchase tickets for the Harlem Globetrotters' game at the Arena on Feb. 26 for $2 each.

The story should have read that students and children 12 and under would receive a $2 discount on tickets. Regular ticket prices are $8, $7 and $6 for reserved seating.

Redbirds upend track women at Charleston

By Martin Folan
Staff Writer

The five-team Eastern Invitational was, in the long run, going to be a dual meet between Illinois State University and SIU-C, Saluki coach Don DeNoon said.

ISU won the meet by scoring 112.5 points and the Salukis placed second with 63.5; but apart from the performance of the Redbirds dominating distance squad, the two teams matched up pretty evenly.

ISU scored 44 points in four long-distance events — the 880-yard run, the 1,000-yard run and the mile and two-mile runs. The Salukis scored just four points in these events.

Subtracting those points from both teams' totals, DeNoon said the meet itself was much closer than the final score revealed; ISU then had 68 points to the Salukis 59.

Distance runner Lisa Hicks is sidelined indefinitely. She made an early comeback after an appendix operation in early January, but aggravated her injury. Her absence hurt the Salukis in the distance events.

Sally Zack added two points to the Saluki score, in the mile and two-mile runs. She ran a personal best in the mile, finishing fifth in 5:15.27. Her two-mile time was 11:16.83.

Kathryn Doelling ran a personal best in the mile, but DeNoon said he thought she would have run 10 seconds faster. She did not score. Her time was 5:18.31.

Finishing behind four ISU runners in the 880-yard run, Doelling picked up one point, crossing the line at 2:28.61.

Patty Kelly scored the fourth point in long distance competition, finishing the 1,000-yard run in 2:47.89.

Sprinter Denise Blackman, the SIU-C record holder in the 440-yard dash, established another record for that event. Blackman ran the race in 57.08. Her previous record was 57.09.

"She wasn't even pushed," DeNoon said. Blackman ran against the Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference's No. 2 runner from ISU, but DeNoon said this competition was not enough to bring out the best in Blackman.

The 60-yard dash saw

Blackman at her best. She set a team record and placed second with a time of 7.06.

Sharon Leidy also earned a second-place finish in her event, leaping 16 feet, 10.25 inches in the long jump.

Rhonda McCausland and Connie Price placed first and second in the shot put, with throws of 48 feet, nine inches and 45 feet, nine inches, respectively.

McCausland scratched on two throws and had a poor effort on a third throw. McCausland could have broken the 50-foot mark, DeNoon said.

lead, Saluki reserve guard Brian Welch committed a key turnover with two minutes remaining. He tried to throw an alley-oop pass to Perry but the ball bounced off the backboard and West Texas State regained possession.

West Texas State used a free throw by Orlando Graham and a basket by McVea to secure the victory.

The Buffaloes placed four players in double figures. Point guard Earl Davis scored a team-high 12 points. Jamison contributed 11 points and Graham and forward William Childs added 10 points each.

Perry scored a game-high 22 points and added seven rebounds for SIU-C. Cleveland Bibbins, who was also in foul trouble, finished with 12 points and a game-high 11 rebounds.

Both teams shot poorly from the field. West Texas was 28 of 76 from the field for 36.3 percent, and SIU-C was 27 of 61 for 44.3 percent. But West Texas outrebounded the Salukis by a 42-35 margin.

SALUKI NOTES: The loss to West Texas extended the Salukis' road losing streak in MVC play to 12 games, which dates back to last season. SIU-C is 0-6 on the road in MVC games this season and 3-31 overall in four years under Saluki coach Allen Van Winkle.

The Salukis return to the Arena for three consecutive home games against Indiana State, Drake and Creighton.

Tulsa vaulted back into a first-place tie with Wichita State in the MVC by defeating the Shockers 87-75 Saturday at Wichita.

Hawks beat Boston 4-3

CHICAGO (AP) — Center Tom Lysiak drilled in a wrist shot in the final period Sunday to lift the Chicago Black Hawks to a 4-3 National Hockey League triumph over the Boston Bruins.

The Black Hawks won their third straight contest — the second within 24 hours over Boston — since Chicago General Manager Bob Pulford took over last week for the fired Orval Tessier. Pulford, who is in his second stint as the Hawks' coach, moved Chicago to within seven points of idle first-place St. Louis Blues in the NHL's Norris Division.

Lysiak's game-winner came after Boston's Morris Lukowich had tied the score just 34 seconds into the final period on a rebound shot.

Chicago's Curt Fraser opened the scoring early in the first period on an assist from rookie teammate Ed Olczyk.

Then with less than five minutes to play in the period

Boston's Keith Crowder scored on a power play. But less than two minutes later, Chicago's Dan Frawley tallied to give Chicago a 2-1 lead.

Early in the second period, Bruin Rick Middleton beat winning Chicago goalie Murray Bannerman to tie the game at 2-2.

But with less than two minutes to go in the second period, Chicago's Steve Larmer gave the Hawks a 3-2 advantage with his 34th goal of the season.

Cage women beat Bradley, extend streak

By Anita J. Stoner
Staff Writer

Petra Jackson and Marialice Jenkins led the Saluki women's basketball team to a 73-46 triumph over Bradley in a Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference game Saturday night in Davies Gymnasium.

The sixth consecutive win improved the Saluki conference mark to 9-2 and 16-5 overall.

During stretches of the first half, the play was dominated by Jackson and Jenkins, who hit outside jump shots to pull the Salukis gradually ahead of the Lady Braves, 37-22 at halftime. The Saluki defense destroyed Bradley's offensive attack by forcing 23 turnovers during the contest.

"I think we definitely played a really good game. I don't think we allowed them to do what they wanted to do. We needed this because we were pressed and pushed and had to perform to win," Saluki Coach Cindy Scott said.

Bradley Coach Angela Beck said the Lady Braves' strategy backfired.

"We took some things away from them, but they showed us they had more than what we could take away," Beck said.

Both teams shot well during the first half but the Salukis' physical size, rebounding and outstanding defense keyed the final margin of victory. The Saluki bench also showed their talents in the final minutes, gaining valuable playing experience.

Beck said playing time is a major factor for her young team which was obviously hurt by the loss of two starters. However, the Lady Braves can be expected to improve. Michelle Braud and Kim Harris showed much potential.

"I thought they (Braud and Harris) had nice moves, good individual performances. But we're struggling with our continuity on offense because we don't have a good team concept yet," Beck said.

Saluki point guard Jenkins found Bradley's defensive flaw with 64 percent accuracy for a total of 14 points.

"I said before the game Jenkins could have her career high because we were going to give it to her," Beck said.

Jenkins' total came two shy of the career high she posted against Drake, a point Scott finds very indicative for the next Saluki game Thursday night against Drake at Des Moines, Iowa.

"Drake plays similar to Bradley, they'll let Marialice have her shot," Scott said.

Jackson once again led the game in scoring with 19 points and game high eight rebounds. Although Jackson did not match Jenkins' field goal percentage, she is steadily climbing out of a slight slump.

"Petra shot better tonight. Everybody expects so much from her every night, and we've not been displeased with her any game this season," Saluki Coach Cindy Scott said.

Cozette Wallace started again in place of Bridgett Bonds. Scott has been platooning the pair with good results. Bonds hit nine points and Wallace added eight.

"We're getting a lot out of the Wallace-Bonds combination. Neither can play a whole game without fouling out," Scott said.

Saluki Ann Kattreh was contained during most of the first half, but eventually contributed eight points when the Lady Braves concentrated on Jenkins.

"We decided to come out more on Jenkins in the second half and Kattreh took up the slack," Beck said.

Scott said, "I think she hasn't shot as well as she has in the past. Good shooters go through periods like that. She'll bounce back."

Center Mary Berghuis played a different type of game by filling up the lane with good defense and the game's second best seven rebounds. Lately teams have tried to take the ball inside against her with little success.

SIU-C defeated Bradley 73-46 for its sixth straight victory.

Cage men lose to WTSU, sink closer to MVC cellar

by Steve Koulos
Staff Writer

In pre-season, the SIU-C men's basketball team had hopes of contending for the Missouri Valley Conference title.

But after an unsuccessful road trip to Wichita State and West Texas State last week, the Salukis are now trying to avoid a last-place finish in the MVC.

SIU-C lost to cellar-dwelling West Texas State 64-57 Saturday to sink to 2-9 in the MVC and 10-12 overall.

The eighth-place Salukis now hold a half-game lead over

West Texas State (2-10, 9-13) in the conference standings. The top eight finishers in the Valley standings will qualify for the MVC Post-Season Tournament, which will be held at the end of the regular season.

Against West Texas State, center Kenny Perry scored 14 of the Salukis' first 20 points to help SIU-C take a 20-17 lead late in the first half. But Perry sat out the remainder of the half after picking up his second personal foul at the 6:13 mark and the Salukis lost momentum.

West Texas State ran off 11 consecutive points, five by reserve Glen Jamison, to take a 28-20 lead. The Buffaloes never trailed after Thomas McVea's field goal gave them a 22-20 lead.

The Buffaloes led 32-24 at halftime and they took their biggest lead of the game at 56-43 on a basket by Jamison before the Salukis made a final comeback attempt.

Behind seven points by reserve center Tony Snooks, the Salukis outscored West Texas State 14-3 over a four-minute stretch to cut the deficit to 59-57 with 3:14 remaining.

After West Texas State guard Eric Carmon countered to give the Buffaloes a 61-57

Sampson, West win NBA All-Star game

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Ralph Sampson scored 11 of his game-high 24 points in the fourth quarter and the Western Conference broke a five-game National Basketball Association All-Star Game losing streak with a 140-129 victory Sunday over the cold-shooting Eastern Conference.

The 7-foot-4 Sampson, who, with fellow All-Star Akeem Olajuwon, forms the Houston Rockets' imposing "Twin Towers" offense, also had 10 rebounds. He was named Most Valuable Player of the game, played before a crowd of 43,146 — an all-time record in any NBA game.

The East had trouble finding the basket after a quick start in the first quarter. Early in the fourth period, the East was shooting only 39.4 percent from the field.

The West never trailed after taking a 34-33 lead late in the first quarter.

George Gervin followed Sampson in the West scoring column with 23 points, 15 of them in the first half.
